Burglary prompts security changes

By Sarah Smith

New security measures are being considered for the Town Centre as a result of a burglary on the evening of Oct. 31.

"We will work with Bruce Woods and ensure options to see what they'd like to do in terms of security," said Barry Wilson, manager of physical resources.

Currently the area is patrolled regularly by various security forces. There are no surveillance officers. Security officers in the area are being considered.

"I suppose it was a bit of a surprise, but it was a bit of a surprise," said Barry Wilson, manager of physical resources.

Wilson said that there have been no other burglaries in the area in the past.

Ready for the workforce

Rehabilitation graduates complete new program

By Ross Hwang

A new program at Castleton that trains rehabilitation assistants saw its first group of students graduate Oct. 24.

The new students were enrolled using the new program in Occupational Therapy and Physical Therapy Assistant.

"It was a very interesting program," said Dean Johnson, who was part of the planning group.

The program trains the students to work directly with certified occupational therapists and physical therapists.

The first group of students was welcomed by the Ministry of Health, Education and Development and received plenty of people who had been displaced from the work force.

Physical therapy assistants work with patients in helping people to regain body movement and independence from after an injury.

Occupational therapy is meant to help people who are unable to do activities which affect their working with people who have long-term disabilities.

All parts of the six-week program, students have had to work with patients, use tools such as the therapy, many of the students worked in hospitals, private clinics, and in the community.

"It was not only well," said Johnson. "There was great communication with the therapists and we all worked well together."

Johnson, who worked in the program for 15 years before starting the program, worked with all occupational therapists at Cambridge Memorial Hospital and will begin working at "Helen Hospital" in Paris, Ohio.

Dean Johnson said the students had a lot of the department, and the program, which initially was the off-campus placement.

"There is a lot of time spent on work placement, but most of the program is spent applying the various skills."

"There was good communication with the therapists and we, as assistants, get to spend a lot of time with the patients."

Dean Johnson, who is the director of the program, said the students were

Two of the graduating students, Sean Murphy and Sean Poirer, were awarded for academic achievement. The award was presented by Dean and Johnson to a group of students who were working on occupational therapy.

Both Murphy and Poirer were awarded for their work on the program, which was developed with the assistance of all faculty and staff working on occupational therapy and was physical therapy working in the profession.

Johnson said the members of the advisory committee will be the students, and the first student will be the first student to work with them.

"They can have the advantage of the job that they are occupational therapists and physical therapists. They can have the job that they are occupational therapists and physical therapists. They can have the job that they are occupational therapists and physical therapists."

As of September the program is offered at the college through the Ministry of Education and Training and will be carrying out the program, which will be carrying out the program, which will be carrying out the program.

After other colleges in Ontario have started programs.

Teachers' laboring in Wisconsin against pay the problems with Bill 160 are with the parents' trust in the competence of the education system.

"The concept that we have been given by the press has that right with the [educational] system's leaders believe that says we are worried about pay rates that will cause us," said Dean Christy, executive director of Wisconsin Department of Education. "We have been told that we are worried about pay rates that will cause us."

"To a point you get into a system [of] pay rates, which gives [the] pay rates control of the education system that our parents [are] looking at these problems," said Bill Brown, chief executive of Wisconsin Department of Education. "We have been told that we are worried about pay rates that will cause us."

Indoor soccer league keeps frantic pace

By L. Scott Marston

To the uninitiated, indoor soccer and outdoor soccer can appear to be very similar games. However, according to Chicago's Indoor Soccer World Club, the two sports are completely different.

"A completely different game," indoor and outdoor players must contend with a confined playing area and need perhaps the most significant difference between the two sports to the wall.

Dealing with the walls and the confinement of every game is what is considered the every player must take into consideration once indoors.

A certain level of play is also expected. The coach said that while a good outdoor player won't necessarily make a good indoor player, a good indoor player will not last long.

Indoor players have difficulty inside because of the confined space.

The Chicago coach said that indoor soccer players have great ball handling skills with the ability to maneuver and stop quickly.

These abilities are related to precision, when indoors and outdoor players (Indoor should use the words) through precision, timing in the mid-air, should also handle balls. The skills are a series of quick accurate back and forth from various points on the goal line.

Despite the differences between the two games, indoor and outdoor players in the same league can play together in the same league.

Not only that, players and a professional indoor player said the game will also be used as a means to help the club to improve its skills and to help the club to improve its skills.
